Description:

The Science of Networks in Communities (SONIC) Research Group at Northwestern University seeks to hire as many as four podcast producers/editors to work on new shows launching on the International Communication Association (ICA) Podcast Network. ICA aims to advance the scholarly study of communication by encouraging and facilitating excellence in academic research worldwide. The Director of SONIC, Noshir Contractor, is the President-Elect of the International Communication Association. Click here to preview the introductory episode of the first podcast series. This position will primarily deal with editing conversational interviews into roughly 20 minute episodes. Producers would also be responsible for the production and publication of the podcast on platforms such as Apple Podcasts, Spotify, and Google Podcasts

Required Qualifications:
- Proficiency in podcast audio production.
- Experience and comfort working with Digital Audio Workstations (DAWs) (e.g., Pro Tools, Audition).
- Experience with script writing based on interview/conversational style podcasts.
- Commitment to work an average of 10-15 hours/week until the end of the 2021-2022 academic year.

Preferred Qualifications:
- Experience with basic sound engineering.
- Experience with podcast production publication.

Application Instructions:
Please send a resume (required) and links to work samples (if available) to Aldo Diaz Caballero (aldodiazcaballero2024@u.northwestern.edu). We are looking to hire candidates ASAP and will continue to consider applicants until the positions are filled.